Calendar Notes

Mark your calendars – The 2021 Global Seminar and ExCo Dialogue will take place virtually on 23 June (13.00-15.30 CEST), providing an opportunity to update stakeholders and answer questions about the IAIS' work.

Registration details and further information about the two sessions will be shared in May.

From the Secretary General

Earlier this week the IAIS shared with the Financial Stability Board (FSB) a progress update on the first year of implementation of the Holistic Framework for the Assessment and Mitigation of Systemic Risk in the Insurance Sector (Holistic Framework). Despite the enormous challenges of 2020, I am pleased to see the significant progress the IAIS and its Members have made, both in terms of implementation of the supervisory standards and in the monitoring of financial stability risks to the global insurance sector.

The Global Monitoring Exercise (GME), the IAIS' risk assessment framework aimed at monitoring key risks and trends and the possible build-up of systemic risk in the global insurance sector, launched in 2020. Due to the pandemic, the IAIS elected to focus the GME on the impact of Covid-19 on the global insurance sector. The GME found that while the global insurance sector demonstrated resilience in 2020, looking ahead, vulnerabilities remain. Accordingly, the IAIS is continuing to monitor and assess the impact of Covid-19 on the global sector, while also completing the regular GME - this time collecting both year-end 2019 and year-end 2020 data. ExCo will have a collective discussion on the potential build-up of systemic risk in the insurance sector at its September meeting.

The assessment of implementation of the Holistic Framework supervisory material also began last year. It is proceeding in phases, having started with a Baseline Assessment (BLA) and proceeding to more intensive Targeted Jurisdictional Assessments (TJAs) in 2021. Taken together, these assessments will provide a clear and transparent picture of how far supervisors have come in the implementation of the supervisory material.

For the 2020 BLA, a total of 26 jurisdictions participated, covering over 90% of the global insurance market and representing a geographically balanced sample. Overall, the BLA reflects a high level of observance and indicates that the 26 participating jurisdictions have made good progress with implementing the relevant standards of the Holistic Framework. The 26 jurisdictions include all 16 jurisdictions identified as being a group-wide supervisor of at least one Internationally Active Insurance Group (IAIG). This progress is particularly positive given that it was achieved in the context of the broader challenges of the global Covid-19 pandemic in 2020. The IAIS will publish a high-level report that provides BLA results for each participating jurisdiction soon.

For more information or to subscribe to the newsletter and e-mail alerts, please visit www.iaisweb.org.
Comments and suggestions are always welcome.

The second phase of implementation assessment, the more intensive TJAs covering ten jurisdictions, was launched in March 2021 and will provide more in-depth verification of supervisory practices.

Undoubtedly, IAIS guidance in the form of Application Papers on various topics related to macroprudential supervision, recovery and resolution have helped support the understanding and implementation of the new and enhanced Insurance Core Principle (ICP) and ComFrame standards. In closing, the Holistic Framework has already proven its worth this past year in terms of facilitating a focus on potential systemic risk that can arise both from sector-wide trends and from a concentration of activities and exposures in individual insurers. The comprehensive and consistent implementation of the Holistic Framework will be key to its success, so it is good to see that we are well on our way.

Jonathan Dixon, Secretary General

In Focus...

Redefining insurance supervision for the new normal

The Covid-19 pandemic tested the operational resilience and adaptability of insurers and insurance supervisors worldwide. Challenges faced and adjustments implemented during the crisis are set to shape the future “new normal” of insurance supervision.

On 9 April, the IAIS together with the Financial Stability Institute (FSI) published a joint note drafted by IAIS and FSI staff that examines measures taken by insurance supervisors to help them adapt to remote working and accelerated digitalisation demands during the Covid-19 crisis. Based on interviews with senior officials from several insurance supervisory authorities, the note describes how insurance supervisors transitioned to remote working since the onset of the crisis, and how this transition has affected their supervisory processes and activities. It also highlights vital human resource and team cohesion aspects that enabled supervisors to adjust more smoothly to these transitions.

Using insights derived during the crisis, the note also explores the potential longer-term impacts of prolonged remote working and proposes some key considerations for insurance supervisors as they continue adjusting to the new normal of digitalisation well into the post-Covid future.

Building back better for insurance supervisors

Lessons learnt from the Covid-19 crisis will be critical to future-proof insurance supervision:

- Streamlined and agile supervisory processes backed by resilient digital infrastructure and closer engagement with insurers and other regulatory agencies will help insurance supervisors cope with future unexpected disruptions.
- Insurance supervision in the new normal will redefine the demarcation between on-site and off-site supervision, with elements of remote supervision becoming a mainstay to enable more efficient and effective supervisory oversight in the future. However, remote supervision cannot entirely replace on-site supervision especially in assessing behavioural aspects of insurers.

- Proper support structures to ensure the ongoing health and wellbeing of supervisory teams will be vital to maintaining effective supervisory oversight in prolonged remote working environments.
- The pandemic accelerated the digitalisation of both insurance supervisory processes and the insurance business value chain. As the pace and scale of digital transformation continues to increase, so will cyber security and policyholder protection risks, which must be appropriately managed.
- Supervisors will need to apply a more holistic approach to technology investments in the future. Adoption of new supervisory technologies will need to be complemented with capacity building programmes that equip supervisors with new digital skill sets required to adapt to supervision in the new normal.

Global coordination efforts to ensure future supervisory resilience

The note concludes that learnings from the current pandemic will be influential in helping to ensure the resilience and continuity of insurance supervision during future crises. To facilitate this, it may be worthwhile for the international supervisory community to consider enhanced global coordination efforts relating to:

- Development of international guidance on emerging good practices for virtual supervision;
- Crisis simulation exercises to assess the resilience of cross-border regulatory coordination and supervisory processes; and
- Investments to develop reusable supervisory technologies that can yield shared benefits for the global supervisory community.

News Updates

Launch of the 2021 Global Monitoring Exercise

On 1 April, the IAIS launched the 2021 Global Monitoring Exercise (GME), aimed at monitoring key risks and trends and the possible build-up of systemic risk in the global insurance sector.

The GME consists of two key components: (1) the Individual Insurer Monitoring (IIM), which builds on analysis of data collected from individual insurers; and (2) the Sector-Wide Monitoring (SWM), which builds on analysis of data collected from insurance supervisors. As the GME was repurposed last year to assess the impact of Covid-19 on the sector<sup>1</sup>, the 2021 IIM and SWM data analysis will cover year-end 2019 and year-end 2020, as well as a more forward looking perspective provided through the qualitative component.

Approximately 60 of the largest international insurance groups, headquartered across 18 jurisdictions, are participating in the 2021 IIM and around 45 jurisdictions are participating in the 2021 SWM, covering over 90% of global gross written insurance premiums

In the third quarter 2021, the IAIS will have a collective discussion to address potential build-up of systemic risk in the global insurance sector, coordinate supervisory response and formulate recommendations and next steps.

The outcome of the 2021 GME will be reported to the Financial Stability Board and non-confidential items will be shared publicly in the IAIS Global Insurance Market Report (GIMAR), expected to be published towards the end of the year.

Eurofi High Level Seminar | 14 April

IAIS Secretary General Jonathan Dixon spoke at the Eurofi High Level Seminar, a virtual event organised in association with the Portuguese EU Presidency on 14 April. Eurofi is a European industry-funded body dedicated to financial services with the objective to improve the common understanding among the public and private sectors of the trends and risks affecting the financial sector.

During his session, Jonathan set out the benefits of the post-crisis reforms, providing the necessary tools and common global language for insurance supervisors to maintain financial stability in the insurance sector. He highlighted the continued momentum of work to develop an Insurance Capital Standard (ICS), following the completion of the first year of the ICS monitoring period and encouraged more insurers to join the growing number of volunteer insurance groups taking part in the monitoring period to ensure that the final standard is suitable for a wide range of business models from all different parts of the world. He noted that the Covid-19 pandemic has provided a real-life lens through which to assess the performance of the ICS and evaluate the importance of a global insurance standard in periods of global stress.

The risks and opportunities of climate change for the insurance sector was also a topic of discussion. Jonathan expressed the importance of the topic to the IAIS, given that climate change effects all core aspects of the IAIS' mission and recognising the central role insurers will need to play in a smooth transition to net zero. Supervisors also play a critical role in supporting this transition, both from a micro- and macroprudential perspective. The IAIS has a robust toolkit of risk assessment, supervisory guidance and capacity building to support supervisors in this regard, and is planning to expand this important work over the coming year in partnership with various networks, fellow standard-setting bodies and stakeholders.

A2ii-IAIS Public Dialogue on Insurance and the SDGs | 22 April

On Earth Day, the A2ii's Head of Secretariat, Hannah Grant, and the IAIS' Head of Implementation, Conor Donaldson, welcomed close to 200 participants from 50 different countries to the A2ii-IAIS Public Dialogue on Insurance and the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

The event was opened by a pre-recorded message from Her Majesty Queen Máxima of the Netherlands, United Nations Secretary-General's Special Advocate for Inclusive Finance for Development (UNSGSA). In her keynote, Queen Máxima addressed the devastating impact the pandemic has had on the uninsured for current and future generations and the role that access to insurance must now play in responding to the crisis, concluding that in order to achieve the 2030 Agenda, it is critical to accelerate insurance as a risk protection mechanism. This was followed by a keynote message from the IAIS delivered by Peter Braumüller, Chair of the A2ii and IAIS Implementation and Assessment Committee. He highlighted and demonstrated the IAIS' longstanding commitment and work on sustainability, climate risk and financial inclusion, reiterating the need for collaboration and a multi-stakeholder approach in addressing these complex issues. He also highlighted the IAIS' key partnerships including the A2ii, the Sustainable Insurance Forum (SIF) and the Network for Greening the Financial System (NGFS).

A panel discussion followed with leading experts: Susan Holliday, Senior Advisor at the International Finance Corporation (IFC), Garance Wattez-Richard, CEO at AXA Emerging Customers, Craig Churchill, Chief of the Social Finance Programme and Team Leader at ILO's Impact Insurance Facility and Christiaan Henning, Senior Insurance Analyst at the South African Reserve Bank (SARB). The panel discussion started with an overview of the role insurance is playing in delivering the SDGs with examples shared by AXA EC and the ILO's Impact Insurance Facility. The World Bank focused on the challenges they have encountered when trying to measure the impact that insurance has on the SDGs amongst the absence of indicators and data. Meanwhile, SARB touched on the challenges that supervisors face when aligning their supervisory mandate with the SDGs and how the goals generally relate to the financial system. However, all panellists agreed that the role insurance plays in supporting sustainable development needs to be better recognised by policymakers and others outside of the insurance sector. Although impact data is lacking, panellists proposed a number of specific actions to try and ensure the insurance sectors contribution is both better recognised and more fully utilised.

Stakeholder Engagement

IIF/EY Insurance Series: Climate Risks and Opportunities for Life and Retirement Insurers and Asset Managers | 12 March

Speaking at a conference hosted by the International Institute of Finance (IIF) and Ernst and Young (EY) on 12 March, IAIS Chair Vicky Saporta set out the need for insurers and supervisors to act now to tackle climate risks. Vicky said that insurers have a central role to play in a smooth climate transition, while supervisors can support the embedding of effective risk management to assess and address climate risks.

From a macroprudential perspective, this year the IAIS will undertake a deep dive analysis on the potential financial stability implications of insurers' investment exposures to climate-related risks. From a microprudential perspective, the IAIS will shortly finalise a comprehensive guide to actions insurance supervisors can take to better understand and manage climate risk. It discusses areas including supervisory reporting, governance and risk management, investment policies and disclosures and provides various practical examples of our Members' experiences.

Vicky noted that there is complete consensus on the need for action within the global insurance supervisory community and reiterated the IAIS' support for a proposal by the Trustees of the IFRS Foundation to establish a new Sustainability Standards Board to contribute to the development of global sustainability standards. Later this year, the IAIS will set out further planned work that will be focused on activities to support insurance supervisors to meet our core objectives to protect policyholders and maintain financial stability in the face of the unprecedented risks posed by climate change. Vicky highlighted the importance of cooperation between the IAIS and the other international financial standard-setters as further work is developed.

ISRG - Global Solutions to Global Problems: Promoting Regulatory Coherence in Financial Services for Pandemic Recovery | 18 March

Speaking on a panel discussion organised by the City of London Corporation, Deputy Secretary Romain Paserot welcomed the unprecedented cooperation and collaboration seen during the Covid-19 crisis as IAIS Members came together to assess and respond to the emerging risks presented by the pandemic. He noted that global regulatory coherence both reduced the negative fallout of the crisis for the financial system during the height of the crisis and will support pandemic recovery and economic growth. Additionally, he noted that over the next two years, the IAIS will embed emerging lessons learned from the pandemic to further improve the cross-border coordination and collaboration seen over the last year between insurance supervisors.
